

Tuesday 8:45 AM.

My Dearest Elsie,

Here in the letter I promised to send by today. I had a good trip home yesterday "Henry" run perfect all the way and rolled in in time for me to make afternoon shift.

They gave me a job Helping Punch at the Converters. It wasn't very stiff one because the wind wasn't blowing.

When the wind doesn't blow the smoke and gas will rise to the top & escape a hole in the roof that was made for that purpose, but when there is a wind from any direction the smoke hangs low in the building.

I made the raise in time to rustle this morning. While eating breakfast Dad said, "if I don't get on day shift I could help him put the water pipes in the house because he is off today.
The personnel manager told me to come back ~~at~~ on afternoon shift
at the Rever Story furnace so will help him until then.

Thanks!!!! for letting me stay
at your place ~~last~~ week end, someday
I will repay you at least a little for your kindness.

It is now mail time so I will sign off with lots of love and sincere appreciation to you and what you do
for me, at all times.

So Long Sweetheart.
Lloyd.
